February 2020 Factsheet

Market Update

The positive market sentiment of January shifted quickly towards the end of the month and into February, following the coronavirus outbreak in China. However, the US market still managed to reach all-time highs in mid-February after it appeared that the virus containment strategy in China had limited the potential problem. But very quickly thereafter investors started getting fearful that the coronavirus was going global.

The full-blown epidemic, which draws parallels to the SARS outbreak in 2003, started to significantly weigh on the global economic outlook. News of the spreading coronavirus stoked global economic fears and affected stocks in a broad cross-section of industries, including energy, travel, airlines, and gaming. With more cases reported in the U.S. – and China's struggles to contain the outbreak – stocks trended lower at the end of the month with the Dow Jones settling down 10 percent for February while the Standard & Poor's 500 Index lost 7.6 percent and the NASDAQ Composite outperformed with a loss of 6.3 percent. Over in Europe, the coronavirus outbreak also drove a heavy market sell-off in late February with the FTSE 100 ending down 12.3 percent, underperforming other European equity markets as a relatively strong British pound weighed on UK equities.

Returns were mixed across geographic mandates in February, with double digit falls in many major markets. Over in the Pacific Rim the explosion in extreme financial market volatility should have been heaven for the hedge fund industry, in particular those hedge funds that operate in the macro space using trend-following strategies. They had been crying out for some market volatility following years of low volatility had made it hard for them to generate high returns. However the volatility in February wasn't the volatility the funds had been looking for, as the Eureka hedge trend-following index in the Pacific Rim plunged 8.39 percent, underperforming their North American Barclayhedge Pacific Rim index which was down 5.35 percent and the European peers who were down only 2.66 percent, respectively.

Investment Manager Outlook Statement

Stuart McAuliffe, Portfolio Manager.

In our view China remains undervalued by the broader market and in the longer term we anticipate that investing in the world largest physical economy to have a positive impact to the Fund's returns. We remain observant to reacting swiftly in either direction.

MONTHLY REPORT

February 2020 Factsheet

Fund Objective

The Investment Manager will seek to provide investors with capital growth over the medium to long-term. The Fund will invest in a range of financial products that focus on global macroeconomics and, in holding both long and short positions, will seek absolute returns regardless of market direction. The Investment Manager's advantage lies in correct assessment of broad valuation measures, macroeconomic environment, sentiment and economic forecasting. The strategy aims to identify medium and long-term trends and trend shifts, but to also vary position size given short-term technical indicators including sentiment and momentum.

Fund Strategy

The Fund will invest in a range of financial products that focus on global macroeconomics.

The goal is to provide investors with exposure to global markets, where returns are not necessarily correlated to traditional ASX equity markets (which is where many listed investment companies focus their investment activities).

In holding both long and short positions, the Fund will seek absolute returns – that is, returns regardless of market direction.

The Fund has a focus on an actively managed portfolio of exchange traded futures and options, trading where the Investment Manager believes that significant valuation discrepancies exist between current trading prices and the underlying intrinsic value of the asset class.

The Fund may also invest directly in equities listed in Australia and offshore on leading exchanges, and can hold relatively large cash exposures. Derivatives may be used to leverage the Fund.

The Fund seeks to maintain a diversity of investments in deeply liquid markets, with the goal of reducing risk and volatility (or the variability of returns).

John Bridgeman Limited (Investment Manager) has been appointed by the Responsible Entity for JB High Alpha Retail Fund to manage the Portfolio in accordance with the terms and conditions of the Investment Management Agreement and the PDS.
